1. The main administrative headquarters of the Seepolizei (HVS) is presently located at Ernst Schnellerstrasse 129 (formerly Koepenicker Landstrasse), Berlin/Oberschoeneweide. Located at this address is a card file containing the names of former German Navy personnel now living in the DDR. Also located in this area is the German Oceanographic Institute which produces the hydrographical maps for the Seepolizei.

2. The Deutsche Schiffs-Revisions und Klassifikations Gesellschaft (DSRK), the responsible agency for the inspection of all vessels in the DDR, no longer is authorized to inspect and test Seepolizei and Wasserpolizei vessels. The Seepolizei and Wasserpolizei have their own inspection commands responsible for all Seepolizei and Wasserpolizei vessels. The DSRK, however, acts as an advisory body to the two water-borne police units.

25X1 3. The triple-screw cruiser [redacted], powered by Junkers double piston diesel engines, has been observed making repeated test runs. The Junkers diesel motors are of World War II vintage and were used because the DDR cannot produce lightweight motors with high power output. The Seepolizei does not have sufficient Junkers motor technicians and is at present offering a monthly salary of 1000 DM to qualified personnel.
